ACTOR BILL COBBS TO BE THE VOICE OF NEW FAITH-BASED CHILDREN'S MEDIA COMPANY

Atlanta, GA (February 4, 2010) – Actor Bill Cobbs, of The Bodyguard and Night at the Museum fame, has agreed to participate in the multi-faith based animated series, Little Lamb Properties. As both the narrator and the voice over for one of the characters, Cobbs becomes not only the voice of the company, but in many respects, the face as well. Scheduled for release in early 2011, the pilot trailer will introduce the characters within the context of an internally branded form of learning, Spiritual Child Development. “This whole bit of people hating other people for the wrong reasons, or for no reason at all, has just gotten old,” said the actor. “The premise of depicting the world through the eyes of kid’s characters representing the many faiths playing and interacting in everyday activities is something so simple and wholesome, and yet has never been done. This is just my way of saying, to heck with all that other nonsense, let’s try to get the story straight before our kids get exposed to some of the poison that is out there today.”

President and co-founder of Little Lamb Properties, Rodney Henderson, states that “Spiritual diversity is an issue that many parents look to address with their children, but at times just don’t know how. Little Lamb™ provides the tools for this to happen, and I could not ask for a voice that better fits our demeanor than the one that Mr. Cobbs brings to the table.”
